Description

A spiritual guide demystifying shadow work, integrating the darkness into power, and embracing the full human experience.

Author Morgan Garza speaks in the voice of a new generation of seekers who crave depth without dogma—people tired of feeling like healing is a full-time job. Love, Light, and Black Holes is for those who've outgrown "good vibes only," who crave something real, and acknowledge the pain, the mess, and the beauty of being fully human.

Love, Light, and Black Holes is not another workbook or therapy clone. It's a living, breathing guide that teaches how to turn collapse into creation, pain into power, and darkness into light. By blending psychology, spirituality, and lived experience, Morgan offers a framework that is both soulful and accessible. You are guided through the three stages of shadow alchemy—the Descent, the Dance, and the Afterglow—to reclaim the pieces of yourself you've buried and to rediscover your innate magnetism.

Love, Light, and Black Holes is a conversation with your darkness. It is a cosmic pep talk, a mirror for you to see yourself clearly again.

Description

An open invitation to find your own narrative and discover the wild daughter within you.

There is a "wild daughter" inside us all, and the old stories are her greatest medicine. A folktale told centuries ago holds the power to gift us great comfort—to liberate us from the modern story we are living in isolation and allow us to be witnessed. In The Book of Wild Daughters, you will find original healing maps, blueprints that outline patterns of initiation, death, and rebirth. Each chapter holds "night lore for the femme untamed," stories that mirror the darkness of the feminine experience—renewal, shapeshifting, and wholeness reflected across cultures like antique mirrors.

Across the three stages of initiation, the book explores hungry women, wolves on the road, stolen skins, devil's bargains, guardian spirits, hidden helpers, trees with faces, the grief sea, the dance at the threshold, healing in the borderlands, wedding the beast, and the original map woven from fate, destiny, and emergence.

Find your path to transformation, loss, rebirth, and becoming in The Book of Wild Daughters.

Description

If the pharaohs didn't build the Sphinx, who did?

In this pioneering study, West documents that:

- Hieroglyphs carry hermetic messages that convey the subtler realities of the sacred science of the pharaohs.
- Egyptian science, medicine, mathematics, and astronomy were more sophisticated than most modern Egyptologists acknowledge.
- Egyptian knowledge of the universe was a legacy from a highly sophisticated civilization that flourished thousands of years before.
- The Great Sphinx represents geological proof that such a civilization existed

In Serpent in the Sky, this edition of a modern classic includes an introduction by the author linking Egyptian spiritual science with the perennial wisdom tradition. Also included is an appendix updating West's work in redating the Sphinx, as well as a new foreword by Graham Hancock.

John Anthony West was an American author, lecturer, guide, and a proponent of the Sphinx water-erosion hypothesis. Early in his career he was a copywriter in Manhattan and a science-fiction writer. He received a Hugo Award Honorable Mention in 1962.

Description

Relive classic ghost stories of Christmas past.

From the fog-bound railways of Charles Dickens to the haunted manors of Elizabeth Gaskell and J. Sheridan Le Fanu, Haunted for the Holidays revives the Victorian custom of the Christmas ghost story.

Curated by noted folklore expert Jeff Belanger, this collection containing twelve classic tales of spectral coaches, kidnapped saints, and restless spirits awaits those brave enough to investigate the shadows. This isn't just a book; it's an invitation to reclaim a lost Victorian tradition of sharing ghostly tales around Christmastime. Featuring many hidden gems, including:

- Edith Nesbit's "The Portent of the Shadow"
- Ada Buisson's "The Ghost Summons"
- Amelia Edward's "The Phantom Coach"
- B. M. Croker's "Number Ninety"

Haunted for the Holidays is meant to be read aloud as the wind howls outside and the night stays longer. Lock the doors, turn down the lamps, and prepare for a Christmas you won't soon forget. The haunting has begun.

Key Selling Points

- Prompts for creativity
- Prompts to push through writer's block
- Channeled messages from your inner story weaver
- Fun for parents and kids to explore ideas and nurture self-expression

Description

Build your own mythic narrative and let your creativity flourish with this magical deck. The combinations are endless!

- Tell your stand-alone message
- Fill in the missing pieces of your own personal story of how to get there
- Read between the lines to reveal the more liminal spaces
- Or build a fuller tale

Thirty-eight cards each hold a single line pulled from somewhere between memory and myth. Alone, a card is a mood. Together, they become a story only you could tell.

Draw one card for a quick spark: a mood, a message, an answer to sit with. Draw three, five, or a whole spread to build a fuller tale with a beginning, middle, and end. There's no wrong number and no wrong order. Read the cards as a straightforward message, or read between the lines for what's implied but not said. Let the images guide you as much as the words. Shared aloud, the cards also make a natural storytelling game for a child—there's no reading required to feel the shape of a tale.

Ask a question before you draw: Where am I headed? What do I need to see? What happens next? Or don't ask anything at all and let the cards ask the question for you.

To help prompt your story, every card belongs to one of six stages, designated by the color on the back:

- Threshold — the call
- Guidance — the allies
- Trial — the challenge
- Insight — the understanding
- Trust — the connection
- Change — the becoming

Fable Craft can also be used for divination with such questions as "Where am I headed in life?" or "What's my best career choice?" Featuring a folk art-inspired style, this mini deck offers prompts with a host of possibilities and outcomes.
